FATHER KNEW WHAT TO DO.

A Child in a Subway Train Who Cried Once Too Often.

An Italian with his wife and two little children got into a New York subway train bound uptown. There were seats enough, so the wife with her child in arms sat down. The man, carrying the other infant, prepared to take a seat.

The moment he sat down the little girl in his arms set up a cry. She wouldn't stop until the man got up. For a time, as long as he remained standing, she was quiet. The moment he started again to be seated she wailed again.

So he had to remain standing. The child then reached for the cord by which the signals are given from car to car. It was too high above her head. So she cried again.

The father tried to divert her attention to the straps as being more worthy of her notice. But she wouldn't be appeased. What was he to do?

Soon answered. He turned the baby over his knee as he sat down firmly and gave her something to cry for. A shocked look came over that little girl's face and then, after a few last bows, she was very silent.

Her father sat there with a look as of one who has solved a problem.

A Narrow Escape.

When Mr. Hartman returned an hour later than usual, Mrs. Hartman asked him the reason, and his good natured face was solem as he answered her. "I had had one narrow escape from drowning, Katchen," he said.

"How was that happen?" asked his wife, as she helped him unwind the knitted scarf from his neck. "Tell to me it at once, Hans."

"It was at the ferry that I came late," said Mr. Hartman, "from the blocked cars, and the boat she was just starting. A man he called me out, 'Jump! Jump!' and for one moment I thought to make as he said. But I reminded myself to be cautious, and wait, and in one minute more, Katchen, came a great patch of water shooting! Then I took both of the post whereby I stood, and said to myself, 'Hans, you were the wise man that you jumped out at first when that man advised.'"

The Clarinet.

The clarinet has the richest, sweetest voice of all the wood-wind instruments, although its sound does not travel quite so far as that of the oboe. Whenever, as sometimes happens, there are two melodies to be played at once, the clarinet takes the lower of the two, while the violin plays the upper and more important one. But in a military band, where there are no strings at all, the clarinet plays the chief melody. The bass clarinet is not so smooth or so sweet as the higher ones. It has a rather cheery sound, though softer than that of the bassoon. "From the Drum of the Savage to the Great Orchestra" in St. Nicholas.

The Gulf Stream.

This great "River of the Sea" flows from the Gulf of Mexico (hence its name) through the Florida Strait along the eastern coast of the United States, and is then deflected near the banks of Newfoundland diagonally across the Atlantic. It is estimated to be 150 miles wide off Charleston, and 300 miles wide off Sandy Hook, where it spreads, fanlike, over the surface of the North Atlantic. Off Cape Hatteras its velocity is reckoned at about 3 miles an hour, off the banks of Newfoundland 1 1/2 miles an hour, then the rate slowly merges into that of the northeasterly drift of the Atlantic—4 or 5 miles a day. Its temperature is from 45 to 51 degrees, according to depth and latitude.

PREHISTORIC GAME FOUND.

Monsters With Which Antediluvian Man Contended.

The remains of the Dryopithecus or fossil man discovered on the Bengawan river, in Java, mixed as they were with fossil bones of reptiles, of the Cretaceous age, and lying in the cretaceous strata, clearly prove that man was contemporary with the later of the giant Saurians. Moreover, the discovery of the Nampas image, a piece of handwork found in the cretaceous strata in Ada county, Idaho, would imply that he had attained some slight degree of art. Assuming then that man was living in the Cretaceous age, the question is, how did he survive his acquaintance with the gigantic Saurians, anyone of which could plow his way through a suburban street today or trample a herd of elephants to death? How did he escape the whining horns of the Triceratops and Ceratosaurs or Plesiosaurs?

The answer to these questions is that even then man possessed intelligence far in excess of that of the other animals. He could supply his lack of natural weapons by means of sharpened rocks and flints and could, by reason of his greater courage, take refuge on the sides of volcanoes and other dangerous places where his gigantic foes dare not follow him. At any rate he not only survived the huge creatures of the later reptilian era, but passed into the Tertiary era of Mammalian stage as the first and greatest of the Mammals.

Ireland To Have Forests.

Ireland has awakened to the value of her forests. A commission appointed by the Crown has just made public its report.

The commission urges the adoption of a scheme for the state to plant about 700,000 acres. This, with the 300,000 acres existing, would give Ireland 1,000,000 acres of forest land, an area which the commission considers as essential. About 20,000 acres would be purchased by the state in mountainous regions and managed as state forest, while 500,000 acres would be planted by the state, but managed by private owners or by county councils.

Denmark, an agricultural country half the size of Ireland, has since 1881 increased her forests by 175,000 acres. Belgium, in spite of her dense population, has added 70,000 acres to her forests in the last twenty-five years.

Ireland is particularly suited in soil and climate for the growth of forests, but only 1 1/2 per cent. of her total area is forested.

Grant's Peaceful End.

The peace that he had so often wished for others came to him at last in the true and more enduring sense. It was the calm death he had hoped for, a gentle and gradual falling to sleep. The weary, anxious night had passed, the rays of the morning sun stole quietly into the death-chamber; but at last there was another morning for him, an other light, glorious, infinite, immortal.

We Poor Men!

"Harry is six years old. 'Pa,' he asked one day, 'if I get married will I have a wife like ma?'"

"Very likely," replied his father.

"And if I don't get married will I have to be an old bachelor like Uncle Tom?'"

"Very likely."

"Well, pa," he said, after a moment of deep thought, "it's a mighty tough world for us men, ain't it?'"

I Would Be Absolute.

And the first thing I would do in my government, I would have nobody to control me. I would be absolute; and who but I. Now, he that is absolute; and can do what he likes, can take his pleasure; he that can take his pleasure, can be content; and he that can be content has no more to desire; so the matter's over.—Cervantes, "Don Quixote."

Special Treatment for Specifics.

Royal households receive all manner of beautiful and curious gifts, many of which are not accepted. When the Prince and Princess of Wales were about to start on a tour round the world, all sorts of antidotes for seasickness were received. One drug dealer sent hundreds of anti-seasick powders, one of which was to be taken every day while at sea. The prince said, "If this fellow expects me to take all these special powders, he should have sent along a special stomach as well."

Swift-Flying Pigeons.

B. A. Fox, of Hunt's Mills, Me., tells of a pair of pigeons with a record of flying from Minneapolis to Boston in fifty hours without taking a morsel of food on the trip. For the last thousand miles they flew in the teeth of a fierce snowstorm. He has another pair of the same breed as those that flew from the balloon of Andre, the Swedish north pole explorer, and several pairs that can make nearly a mile a minute.

ONE TEST FOR PEARLS.

Berlin Hotel Porter's Experiment That Was Not a Success.

The porter of one of the leading Berlin hotels has just had a curious adventure. Some time ago a dealer in pearls who was stopping at the hotel told him an infallible way to distinguish real pearls from false, which was to put them on the ground and stamp on them. If real they would resist the test, if false they would be crushed.

The porter, however, never had a chance of putting this theory to the test until a few days ago. The director of a well known company in Berlin, while dining at the hotel, lost a valuable pearl pin. This was found by the waiter, who gave it to the porter to return to its owner.

The porter saw his opportunity had come at last to test the quality of a pearl. He put the pin on the ground, placed his heel on it and ground it to a powder. When the owner arrived to claim it there was a somewhat stormy scene, but he was good natured enough to consent to say no more about the affair on the porter refunding half the value of the pin, 600 marks. In future the porter will submit any jewelry he may find for expert opinion.

A Mere Detail.

The common practice of lawyers in addressing the jury to single out one member who seems to them the most intelligent, and therefore the one most likely to be influenced by their appeals," observed a Chicago attorney, "does not always work out advantageously."

All the testimony in a case recently tried in Ohio had been taken, the lawyers for both sides had summed up and the judge had charged the jury, when up rose the intelligent juror against whom both counsel had thundered their impassioned appeals. He wanted the court to give him some information.

"I have been bothered a good deal by two words the lawyers use here all the time," said the intelligent juror.

"What are they?" asked the court expecting, no doubt, to be called upon to expound "res inter alios acta" or "a fortiori," or some other abstruse term.

"Plaintiff and defendant," said the juror. "I don't know just what they mean."

Flying Fish.

Interesting are the habits of the flying fish, that queer denizen of the sea, found principally in the region of the trade-winds. Does it rise from the sea like a bird? you ask. No; it shoots out of the waves like an arrow, and with out spreading wings sails on the wind in graceful curves, rising sometimes, one might say, to the height of fifteen feet, but not often so high, and then lowering it again touches the crest of a wave and renews its flight. This operation may be repeated till it covers a distance, say, of five hundred yards, in the case of the stoutest of the wings, though very often not half that distance is covered. A ship sailing through the trade-winds will often be visited, on dark nights, by flying fish which hit the sails or rigging and fall on deck, where, of course, they soon give up life.

Women Not as Strong as Men.

"Women are not on the average but half as strong as men," said Dr. Barger, the director of athletics at Harvard, in a lecture recently.

"Their lung capacity averages but 140 cubic inches, while that of man is 240 cubic inches. In nearly every instance," he said, "where women excel in sports of the rougher or more masculine sort they have either inherited or acquired masculine characteristics."

For the Music Room.

No piano can possibly be heard to advantage in a room which is either heavily curtained or is overcrowded with furniture. A good plan to insure the correct temperature of the room in which the piano stands is to keep a growing plant there. So long as the plant thrives you can tell that any changes of heat and cold there may be are not sufficient to affect the instrument.

Some Odd Facts in Geography.

New York is usually thought of as being directly west from London. It is, however, despite its far more rigorous climate, nine hundred miles nearer the equator than is the British capital. The bleak coast of Labrador is directly west of London. The same line passes the southern part of Hudson Bay and Lake Winnipeg; on the other side of the continent it touches the centre of the Isthmus of Kamchatka, and Siberia and Russia to Housburg. It is astonishing, likewise, to reflect on the fact that Montreal, with its winters of great severity, is three hundred and fifty miles nearer the equator than is London. Montreal, indeed, is on the same degree of latitude as Venice. Another illustration of the unexpected in contrasts is found in a comparison of St. John's, Newfoundland, with Paris. Paris has a winter of comparative mildness, while St. John's is a region of bitter cold and fog, with drifting icebergs along its coast. Yet St. John's is one hundred miles nearer the equator.—Dunn's Advertiser.
